

WHAT KIND OF ELEPHANT ARE YOU?

Elephants live in herds, with groups of female elephants all traveling together and taking care of the young calves. See how many laps you can do and what kind of elephant that makes you!

CALVES: 0-10 laps

AUNTIES: 11-20 laps

MATRIARCHS: 21-30 laps

TUSKERS: 31-40 laps

ICONIC TUSKERS: 41 and more laps

Calves: You're a little elephant just starting out in the world! Elephants are pregnant for nearly 2 years (22 months), so every baby elephant is precious! Calves can be anywhere from 150-300 pounds when they are born, making them big babies. They don't stay little for long, gaining 2-3 pounds per day, so enjoy being a little cutie while you can!

Aunties: Good job! You're an Auntie! Herds of elephants are predominately made up of females and their calves, and the entire herd of aunties helps to take care of the young. You play a valuable role in taking care of the next generation.

Matriarchs: Excellent job! You are the leader of the herd! Matriarchs are the head female elephant in charge, deciding where the group will go next to find food and water. It's a lot of responsibility, but they are also very smart, so you can handle it.

Tuskers: Jumbo kudos! You are a tusker, one of the mature male elephants who has left the herd. You've grown too old and big to live with your aunties so you now travel through the savannah as a bachelor looking for adventure!

Iconic Tuskers: Congratulations, you are the biggest, most majestic elephant in the world! Iconic Tuskers are male African elephants who have ivory that's over 100 pounds per tusk! Due to poaching and illegal ivory trade there are very few of them left in the world, but their survival is extremely important for genetic diversity. Be proud, you are a very rare, impressive elephant.
